Gregory Cook is a shareholder in the firm's St. Louis office and is a member of the civil litigation and insurance defense practice group. He has practiced his entire career with MVP Law.

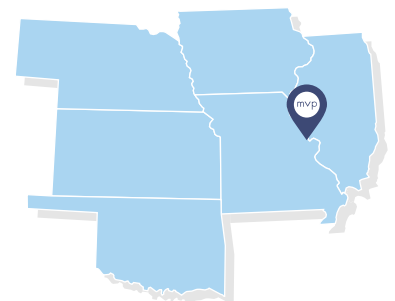

Greg's practice focuses on defending clients in a variety of federal and state civil litigation, including complex litigation, commercial vehicle accidents, and wrongful death claims. Greg provides counsel to clients regarding general tort claims, including defamation, intentional infliction of emotional distress, negligence, and product liability claims. Additionally, Greg assists clients in pursuing and defending claims of subrogation and contractual indemnity claims.

Greg is a graduate of the Litigation Management Institute and has been designated a Certified Litigation Management Professional (CLMP). He regularly presents to clients on all aspects of claims handling and litigation management issues from pre-suit handling of claims to discussions regarding mediation and negotiation techniques.

Greg and his wife, Elizabeth, live in Webster Groves, Missouri. They are active in their church and in the community of Webster Groves. They spend much of their free time with their three children. Although they now consider themselves St. Louisans, they are still passionate Indiana University basketball fans and watch the Hoosiers at every opportunity.
